Your pet will receive a thorough physical examination prior to any procedure or surgery. We also perform pre-anesthesia laboratory tests so we can minimize potential risk and make the best decisions before administering general anesthesia. These blood tests allow us to discover sub-clinical infections, inflammatory processes, anemia, and platelet disorders. Liver and kidney function are also evaluated to ensure adequate excretion of anesthetic by-products. Results will be immediately available before anesthesia and/or surgery.

We are committed to providing the highest level of care for your pet which includes continuous monitoring of pulse rate, respiratory rate, temperature, ECG, blood oxygenation and blood pressure when indicated. Once the surgical procedure is complete, our patients are transferred to a recovery cage which includes a heating pad and warm blankets. We will contact you (at the number below) once the surgery is complete and your pet is in a stable condition in the recovery unit.

To help alleviate pain and discomfort associated with your pet's surgical procedure, we incorporate pain-controlling medication into our anesthetic protocols. We strive to ensure that your pet is as comfortable and pain-free as possible.
